

BOOK NOW

Call us at (860) 779-0608
today to reserve your pet's spot!

Are you surprised to hear this? When you consider the ways our beloved pets can suffer from health problems, you may picture the latest hot topic on social media, or the mysterious disease that claimed your friend's sweet cat. But plain old dental disease leads the pack.

Chew on this:

Dental disease is sneakier than a Lab with their owner's missing sock. It may be called "dental disease", but it doesn't limit its damage to your pet's mouth. Any infection there can actually invade the bloodstream and infect internal organs like the heart, liver, and kidneys, with the potential to cause fatal damage.

Dental disease is scary stuff for sure, but don't despair! The tradeoff is that you can have a very positive impact on your pet's health, simply by making their dental health a priority. Keeping their teeth clean will help to keep bacterial buildup in their mouth at bay.

And aside from the health benefits of pet dental care, there's the added perk of enjoying your pet's sweet-smelling breath instead of wanting to run! Chronic bad breath is not normal and is very often a strong indication of dental disease.

We've got you!

Are you brushing your pet's teeth at home? Bravo, that's amazing! But your pet will still likely occasionally need professional dental care. A dental evaluation and treatment at our practice will help keep your pet's mouth and entire body healthy.

Click here to learn about professional veterinary dental care and what to expect should your pet need it.

Some common signs of dental  disease in pets:

- Chewing with one side of the mouth
- Broken teeth
- Excessive drooling
- Visible tartar buildup
- Visible gum inflammation
- Bad breath (halitosis)
- Pawing or rubbing at the mouth or muzzle
- Reluctance to eat or play with toys using the mouth

This list is helpful for general reference, but keep in mind that playing and eating and other normal behavior doesn't necessarily mean a pet's mouth is 100% healthy. Dogs especially won't let much interfere with their desire to munch on food (same, dogs, same), and all animals - cats especially! - will instinctively hide signs of illness and discomfort for survival.

Even attentive pet owners like you may see no signs of dental disease at all, which is why it's so important to let us evaluate your pet's dental health regularly.

Click here to learn more.

3 GREAT REASONS FOR PET DENTAL CARE:

1. Sparkling, smooch-worthy pet breath
2. Help prevent painful dental disease.
3. A longer and healthier life with more fun times to share together!

Call us today at (860) 779-0608 to schedule an appointment. Whether your best pet buddy needs a comprehensive dental treatment or a quick dental check-up, we'll help you get their entire body feeling great - from clean, fresh mouths to happy tails!

Sincerely,

Your friends at Brooklyn Veterinary Hospital

Brooklyn Veterinary Hospital
150 Hartford Road
Brooklyn, CT 06234 United States
(860) 779-0608
<http://www.brooklynvethospital.com>

Manage your pet's healthcare
Anywhere. Anytime. Online.

